

The Power of Partnerships Family Survey

Dear Families,

The best way to make sure every student in our school succeeds is to build a strong partnership between families, the school, and the community. The survey below gives you the opportunity to tell us what our school is doing well to support this partnership and what we can do better.

If you would like to help tally and analyze the results, please let us know.

PTA engages families, boosts student achievement

Sheila Ragland, president, and Susan Hans, president-elect, Ohio PTA

The purpose of PTA is to make every child's potential a reality by engaging and empowering families and communities to advocate for all children. We believe family engagement is key to achieving that goal.

What is family engagement? Family engagement is the shared responsibility among parents, administrators and teachers in making decisions, setting goals and achieving desirable outcomes for students. It is any interaction that provides two-way communication among parents and school staff. We know students do better in school if their parents consistently relay the importance of education.

PTAs emphasize that message through communications and programs based on National PTA's National Standards for Family-School Partnerships:

- Standard 1 — Welcoming all families into the school community: Families are active participants in the life of the school, and feel welcomed, valued and connected to each other, school staff and what students are learning and doing in class.
- Standard 2 — Communicating effectively: Families and school staff engage in regular, two-way, meaningful communication about student learning.

- Standard 3 — Supporting student success: Families and school staff continuously collaborate to support students' learning and healthy development, both at home and at school, and have regular opportunities to strengthen their knowledge and skills to do so effectively.
- Standard 4 — Speaking up for every child: Families are empowered to be advocates for their own and other children to ensure students are treated fairly and have access to learning opportunities that will support their success.
- Standard 5 — Sharing power: Families and school staff are equal partners in decisions that affect children and families and together inform, influence and create policies, practices and programs.
- Standard 6 — Collaborating with community: Families and school staff collaborate with community members to connect students, families and staff to expanded learning opportunities, community services and civic participation.

How PTAs facilitate engagement using these standards

First, PTAs welcome all families into the school community. That effort starts at the beginning of the school year when we invite parents to a social or community service event or the first regular PTA meeting. These events can include ice cream socials, picnics or school supply donation weekends such as Stuff the Bus. In addition, PTA presidents speak at kindergarten and new family orientations, open houses or a coffee with the principal. It also is important for the PTA president to welcome the teachers back to school. The PTA president often shares with teachers how PTA makes all families feel welcome and discusses plans for the year.

To encourage effective communication, PTAs use a variety of ways to reach as much of the school population as possible. We use social media, email, phone calls or a Web page or Web link to the PTA page on the school website. PTAs also issue monthly print or electronic newsletters that feature school and PTA news. The first PTA newsletter of the year should include a volunteer form so everyone has an opportunity to help. On that form, PTAs ask for the best way to communicate with each parent or family. PTA meetings and programs are open to everyone, including staff and administrators. At those events, we try to help families feel comfortable in the school building and encourage interaction with staff. We also recognize that not all families are able to regularly participate in meetings and events, so we offer opportunities to volunteer at home or contribute a talent on an occasional basis.

PTAs hold events throughout the year that support student success and promote the well-being of all children. These events might be a Fathers Walk, summer reading celebration, Grand Friends Day, family fun bingo night, student art show, literacy night, cultural heritage celebration or carnival. In February, PTAs are encouraged to participate in Take Your Family To School Week, which highlights activities that focus on families being together with staff in the school setting. PTA programs should reflect the diversity of the community. We believe the school atmosphere should be inviting and a place where families from all cultures and socioeconomic strata belong.

How do PTAs speak up for every child? As an issue-oriented organization, we provide parents with one of the most effective ways to become involved in their child's, and every child's, education. PTA is the largest volunteer child advocacy organization in the nation and we are dedicated to educating parents on state and national issues affecting children and families. PTAs host speakers to let parents know how legislation affects their schools and children. Recently, Ohio PTA sponsored a statewide conference call with U.S. Sen. Sherrod Brown (D-Ohio) about the Elementary and Secondary Education Act legislation, giving parents and educators across Ohio an opportunity to engage with an elected official at the national level. The Ohio PTA and National PTA websites are valuable resources for information on current legislation and policy issues.

PTAs are good communication channels between schools and parents. PTAs encourage shared decision making by providing opportunities for families to develop relationships with school building and district leaders. These ongoing relationships give families formal and informal ways to raise concerns. PTA meetings offer a place where school leaders can share building and district information and seek parental feedback on issues. A PTA and school district can hold forums where district leaders speak to parents about changes taking place in the school community. Consistent two-way communication with families builds trust in and support for their schools.

Fostering collaboration with the community is achieved through PTA members, who typically are involved in other local community organizations. PTAs help new families feel welcome in the school community. Our events and meetings allow time for families to establish social relationships after PTA business is conducted. PTA members contribute their talents and time and use their community connections to find resources for career planning and other enhanced learning programs. PTAs encourage civic responsibility by sponsoring candidate nights during local elections and participating in community service projects.

PTA is a powerful voice for all children, a relevant resource for families and communities and a strong advocate for the education and well-being of every child. Family engagement and connecting parents with school and community is the heart of its mission. ■

What is The Clean Fuels For Schools Initiative?

The Clean Fuels For Schools initiative is part of a public, private partnership developed to cooperatively assist in the development and integration of "best technology" and adoption of "best practices" to improve Ohio schools energy security, economic stewardship and environmental impact. The CFFS specifically works with Ohio schools to adopt new "clean" standard for the fuel storage tanks and the use of the new high performance fuels. This program is offered to Ohio Schools with fuel storage and dispensing capability.

The purpose of the Clean Fuel For Schools initiative is to:

- ✓ Provide a healthier environment for children by reducing the emissions coming from diesel-powered buses
- ✓ Reduce the maintenance cost and extend the life of your school buses by eliminating the contamination and poor quality of fuel
- ✓ Reduce fuel use annually by using a highly refined fuel

The 5-year Objective of the Clean Fuel For Schools initiative is to:

- ✓ Reduce 10 Million gallons in fuel for Ohio Schools
- ✓ Decrease 200 million of lbs. of school bus emissions by 2020
